Internal Revenue Matters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 6.—The policy of consolidating Internal Revenue Districts in different States, which, by direction of the President, has been tried in several States, North and South, and found to work admirably, and which has caused immense saving in the expenses of the Revenue Bureau, is to be very soon tested in other States. For this purpose plans are just now being per-fected and will be announced shortly. THE DISPLACEMENT OF COMMISSIONER

Mayor Johnston, of Cincinnati, and other official dignatiries of that city, accompanied by representatives of the different Cincinnati newspapers, arrived in the city over the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railforad on the 9:30 accommodation train.

They were taken in charge by the Mayor and other city officers, who did the hospitalities of Dayton in a fitting and appropriate manner. The special train on the Dayton Short-line road, bearing the main body of Cincinnati excursionists, did not arrive until after ten o'clock. The number on this train was not as large as had been expected. Every train from Cincinnati has, however, the cincinnation of the official dignatives of the dispersion of the city officers, who did the hospitalities of Dayton in a fitting and appropriate manner. BROOKLYN, May 6.—The principal witness after recess yesterday was Mr. Bowen, who was called by the prosecution. Much surprise was manifested when he was called, and his testimony when he was carried, and his testimony was eagerly listened to. He contradicted Beecher's testimony in several important particulars, and materially aided the strength of the prosecution, as will be seen by the testimony, as follows:

The day the advertisement appeared a friend of "the Purveyor," Julius Bantling, appeared at the St. Micholas with the pocket-book, and stated that it had been left at his place of business the night previous by "the Purveyor" himself. Ed. Roth then gave the Purveyor a description of Bantling as the the man who answered the advertisement, Peters declaring that that was the man he-saw and that he would recognize him in a thousand years. Later in the day Bantling and the Purveyor, and a number of friends called at the St. Nicholas, and Bantling treated to the wine and cigars, telling the Roth boys to take that five dollar bill which had been put in a frame for the man who should answer the advertisement to square the bill. This let the joke out, and the Purveyor knew that he had been sold. He ordered the wine and cigars again.
